I never thought I was going to be a soccer coach, but somehow I found my way here and I really love what I do. When I get up in the morning it is not a task for me to go to work. Soccer is a beautiful game and I try to pass on my love for it to every player I coach. In order to form a strong team I have to see each one of my players as individuals, so I evaluate them. I try to get to know them. I ask not for them to be great at everything, I only ask that they try their best. Games are competitive, and practice must be as well but also, in my opinion, player development is more important than results at the youth level.
